Ready for a wet first day?

The weather is looking like it is going to be wet for the first day of Campwest.

Dreaming of sunny days on Scout Camp? Forget about it for today because it's going to get a bit wet here at Campwest.

With the two storms off the coast of WA we are expecting a bit of rain for today and Monday. After that it is expected to clear up for the rest of the week.

Hope you packed a rain coat because we are going to get wet. If not, make sure you visit your nearest hub and we will see what we can do to help you out.

First Scout arrives at Jarrahdale

Dane, the first Scout to arrive at Jarrahdale Oval, had an early start yesterday. Dane arrived on site at 7:45 ready for his bus to bring him to Manjedal.

He was the first of many eager Scouts to pile onto a bus and head off to site yesterday, more than 800 Scouts in fact.

Some Scouts had an early morning at Jarrahdale Oval ready for the buses to arrive.

Dane, if you are reading this, or one of your Patrol members are, come along to the Vakarma Hub and get yourself a prize.

Do you know how to ride a pushbike?

This is Ikki from Ballajura Scout Group. Ikki doesn't know how to ride a pushbike but had to learn quickly when she had to make a quick dash to the Q-store to check that the sausages for last nights dinner were gluten free. All her efforts paid off when she found out that they were in fact gluten free.

If you see Ikki on your way around site, make sure you give her your best push-biking tips to help her learn how to be the best she can be.

Some people just can't ride a bike, and that's OK.

Many busses to move many Scouts

When you have lots of Scouts it takes lots of buses to move them around.

Did you think the buses were lost yesterday? It may have seemed that way as they kept going round and round in circles, but trust us they weren't.

Each of the four buses did six trips between Jarrahdale Oval and Manjedal. That's a total of 26 trips to get all the Scouts on site, and it took a full day.

The amazing bus drivers that did all this work will also be taking everyone off-site for each of their activities throughout the week. So when you get onto a bus over the next few days make sure you thank your bus driver because they have been working very hard to move you around.
