

The mystery error revealed

So the error was all in this picture here. Yesterdays story was all about socks, but the picture was still the grey clouds from Sundays story about the weather. The Survival Guide editor forgot to change the picture until it was too late and the printing was completed.

Unfortunately no one submitted the correct answer to win the prize, all of the guesses were about grammatical errors that were not spotted in the proof reading.

Hopefully we don't make the same mistake twice. Please note that the picture has been left as a picture of clouds intentionally.

Scout Rangers tell us that they are busy

If you have ever seen the Scout Rangers, you would know that they are always running around getting things done.

Well...

We think it's all fake, as you can tell by the picture, the Scout Rangers are sitting down doing nothing.

Nothing is out of reach for Scouts now that they can crate stack

Scouts doing Crate Stacking at Two Gum Oval

Yesterday Scouts enjoyed some nicer weather than what they experienced on Sunday.

This nice weather was perfect for scouts to get out and try some new and exciting activities, such as crate stacking.

The art of balancing old milk crates on top of each other might look easy, but it definitely is not. After every new crate is added the tower reaches higher and higher into the sky. Your patrol will gasp in awe as you get further from the ground, and it wobbles more and more. After a while it gets harder to balance off the side, and eventually you will lose your balance and you will send the entire tower crashing to the ground below you. A victorious Scout is left suspended in the air by their harness and the remainder of what used to be their tower lies beneath them.

Are you ready to take on the challenge of crate stacking? Make sure to give it a go, and see how high you can go.

The secret's out!! Venturers don't know how to play UNO!

Recently a group of Venturer Scouts were spotted in the Vakarma Hub attempting to play a game of UNO.

Some nearby Scouts were watching them play their game. After a while it became clear that the Venturer Scouts had no idea how to play UNO. "They weren't even playing with the right cards," said one of the Scouts who was watching the disaster of a game take place.

Fog rolls in as bad weather blows over

wind to be felt. The lack of wind meant that a blanket of fog was able to settle across the site yesterday morning.

At least all of the Scout Units were prepared and had gotten their tents properly secured. It's just a shame that there was no wind to test how well the tents had been set up. Everyone at Campwest is hoping that we don't get much wind for the remainder of the camp, to ensure that it doesn't get too cold.

After a busy evening of making sure all of the tents across the site were secured and ready to brace for strong winds, yesterday morning was still, with not a bit of

What does the weather look like today?

The weather today is going to be much nicer than it has been over the last two days. It is set to be overcast with a high of 18° and a low of 7°

The Survival Guide moves over to page 2

Look at this. The Survival Guide has become so popular that we have had to move to a second page. We have been receiving so many great story lines that we ran out of room on just the one page, we then turned the page over and found this whole other side we could use.

We are getting so many stories that we have had to go onto a second page to fit it all in.

This might not happen every day, but just the days that we have lots to share. So make sure you check each day, just in case we are hiding some great stories here. We wouldn't want you to miss out on anything.

Don't forget, if you have an interesting story to share, put a suggestion in the green box in either of the Village Hubs.

If you get it in before 12pm each day, then you might have your story in the next edition of The Survival Guide. We may even come and visit you to hear more about your story.

Fury friends hop in to say hello to the Welfare Team

Some friendly visitors to the Welfare Team

The Welfare Team had some special visitors yesterday, with some young kangaroos hopping in to say hello. Welfare aren't the only ones who have been lucky enough to spot some of the local roos, they can be found all over Manjedal. Have you seen any?

Scouts fly through the air at Trees Adventures

Scouts zip lining at Trees Adventure Dwellingup

Scouts had another day of off-site activities, with some spending a few hours high in the trees of Dwellingup at Trees Adventures.

This activity includes zip lines, bridges, an upside down pushbike, and much more, all suspended high in the air as you swing between the trees.

Not only do Scouts get to do this, they also spend half the day canoeing along the Murray River at Lane Poole Reserve.

If you haven't done this activity yet, then there is lots to look forward to.

The UK has Bear Grills, we have Bear

Although he might not have his own TV Show, and he probably doesn't spend his spare time with celebrities, we think our Bear is pretty good.

Bear is a Scout Leader at Hampton Park Scout Group, and was caught having a break while he was at Dwellingup Trees Adventures yesterday. If you are lucky, you might see Bear out and about taking pictures at Campwest. If you see him, make sure you say hello.

Please note, we cannot confirm if Bear eats dead animals off the side of the road, but if he is anything like Bear Grills, then he definitely would.
